The impossible dream? What is the impossible dream? We all will have different answers to those questions, but how about we change it to the I'm possible dream. That we all learn to dream and think bigger, not just me. The song says: And the world will be better for this, that one man, scorned and covered with scars, still strove with his last ounce of courage to reach the unreachable star. That has a personal message for me this lifetime. One man scorned and covered in scars is an apt description. But I chose to ignore the rejections, scorn, abuse plus the internal and external scars, to keep on fighting and reach the I'm possible dream or vision of the future I carried for many decades. I know this world is a mess, battle scarred and torn, yet someone or something has to provide hope and real solutions to get us all motivated and operating in a better way again. Just us against the long reach of his story, but with will, effort and belief we can turn it into our story. This is what the Blueprint is all about. Many will say it is an impossible dream, yet what you all should have gathered by now is, if not us, then who? I will tell you what is the impossible dream, waiting for the governments or the masses to fix anything. One never fixed anything and doesn't have a plan, the other sits there and complains yet still tolerates the utter shit they are offered. They will never fix anything, too busy wallowing in their own misery and victimhood, all whilst proudly wearing their slavery suits. All whilst bowing to a system that is permanently broken, yet how many realize it yet? With my twelve day trip now completed that was a mix between family and work, we are back to the shows again I know you all missed. For many on the trip, the shows now will have a deeper meaning and purpose, following that trip. A reminder to all who went is to take that frequency and love generated within that trip with you and use it to spur you all onto greater heights.

The People's Club Gardening and Non-GMO Food Communal Gathering, Monthly Update for August 2023 This month the Garden Group discussed the meaning of organic. The idea of organic started with an attempt to provide consumers with information about the farming practices in the production of their food. This concept has been co-opted by greed-based organizations that have made themselves the experts, creating labels that force farmers to pay inflated fees and go through inspections, purchasing expensive products and being restricted in their farming practices, all to be certified organic. It is like a trademark. It results in the higher prices consumers pay. At this point it is another harvesting program. Most vegetables have been hybridized over many years, through a natural process of cross pollination in the garden and selecting seeds from varieties with preferred attributes. This happens naturally with plants of the same type. Laboratory experimentation with food plants resulted in Genetic Modification (GMO), which is unnatural manipulation of the DNA of plants to combine Food plants with non-food plants for higher production, resulting in higher profits. For example, some plants that are not edible contain natural antifreeze which makes them able to withstand light frost. When those plants are genetically combined with food plants, it results in a vegetable that can withstand frost. But the testing to see if the food plants are toxic to humans is not thorough enough and incidents of food allergies are dismissed as unrelated. Seeds from genetically modified plants can be grown under Certified Organic Conditions. Are they labelled as organic? Another genetic modification is the manipulation of plants to ensure that they do not produce seeds. When these plants cross pollinate with non-GMO plants of the same family, they can result in seeds that will produce plants that never go to seed. These are called terminator seeds. Considering the distance that bees travel, this is quite concerning as old vegetable strains, become extinct. Are there Certified Organic seedless grapes? Chemical fertilizers are the base elements that plants require to grow. They are refined and produced in labs. Scientists have studied plants to find out which chemicals will cause the plants to produce the largest leaves, or largest fruit. They essentially force feed the plant on a diet that is unbalanced, resulting in an obese plant. It is larger but it has less nutrition and more water in it, as it hasn't had time to develop dense cells. Natural farming does not use refined chemicals, but products from nature such as compost to slowly feed the plants. This is why home-grown produce tastes so much better and smells so much better. To counteract the problem of the droughts in California, farmers watered their fields with fracking water. This resulted in what one member described as those diesel-tasting carrots from California. Generally the best way to tell if food is good for you is to follow your nose. Good produce smells better. Is that why so many Vegetables in the store are tightly wrapped in plastic? The Garden group agree that Natural Farming Practices produce the best food. We have also found that many things influence gardening outcomes, from the bacteria of the garden soil, to the mood and intent of the person planting the seeds. The high vibration of the gardener and the attention given to the plants can help vegetables thrive under poor growing conditions. The TPC Garden Group are not only discussing Gardening. We have been influenced by the topics covered in the Thursday THI Shows. This can cause the conversation to go into other related subject areas. We strive to keep meetings positive to raise each other's vibration, often with laughter, being supportive and learning together, we're not too serious or rigid about practices, such as whether permaculture is better than Korean Natural Farming. We are not comparative or competitive. We welcome anyone even if they don't know much about gardening. We have also enjoyed drop-ins from members of other groups, such as the School Curriculum Gathering. We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to the web team and the members who are doing data entry for the Garden Guide. The TPC Gardening and Non-GMO Food Communal Gathering continue to meet weekly on Saturday Mornings at 9.00 am M.S.T. The zoom link can be found in the Community Gatherings Forum under the Gardening CG Zoom Link Topic.

BLUEPRINT ACTION TEAM REPORT (CONSOLIDATED September 10 & 24, 2023)
INTERNATIONAL BLUEPRINT ACTION MEETING: Members of the Blueprint Action Team met in Dublin last week to bond and connect in-the-flesh. Videoconferencing being the main way for participants to connect across the globe, this three-day gathering brought together people from a wide array of countries in Europe, as well as members from Britain and North America. A fabulous time was had by all. There is no substitute for being with people who support you, in candidly discussing anything on your mind. It creates a kind of visibility and safety that encourages each person to shine. No one needs to be an expert on anything to participate. The process is organic, and each person is encouraged to grow into any pursuit they can imagine.

BOOK TEAM: The French translation of the Divine Masculine and Divine Feminine booklet, is available to go on the communal gatherings website and the Consent booklet is being translated. The Polish translation of the Blueprint is ready for the website. The German translation of the Blueprint is nearing completion. The German translation of From His Story to Our Story Volume 1 is in the proofreading stage. The French version of the Consent Booklet is completed and will soon be on the thinkdifferent website. The Blueprint PDFs have been amalgamated with their covers. The English, French, and Polish Blueprint PDFs are on The New Blueprint For Humanity website. Something to consider: Membership may reflect the world. The same people doing, supporting, active, and those who are doing one thing in support are probably doing all. Usually 1-2% of the same people are doing the work. A small group of people can make a big difference by working together to manifest the world they want. It creates a kind of mastermind group, visualizing a better world, and more importantly, working to manifest it.

RESEARCH TEAM: The Blueprint Research Team has finalized the database design format. Now they are continuing to categorize each influencer into distribution sets of 25 by an A-B-C system of priority. Each set will be forwarded to the THI Admin team for final approval and determination, as to either sending them an actual copy of the book or emailing them the PDF. Under consideration now are: 1. Professor Richard Wolff of Democracy at Work 2. Vivek Ramaswamy 3. Crow 777 4. H. Pearl Davis 5. President of Ghana (His Eminence Nana Addo Dankwa Akufo-Addo) 6. Thomas Melville 7. Douglas McGregor 8. Joe Rogan 9. Jimmy Dore 10. Drew Bridgen 11. Kerry Cassidy of Project Camelot 12. King Abdullah II of Jordan 13. Calin Georgescu of the Truth-Justice & Sparta-Justice groups. (He lives in Romania and may be the first to receive our Romanian translation of the book as soon as it is ready for release.) Eleven more are under scrutiny by the research team for first tier qualifications. Once the name approval process is complete, the versions can be sent out. Next, the name list can be provided to the Media Team. They can then watch for and report any feedback on social media sites. As mentioned previously, we've sent Blueprint books to Elon Musk, Candace Owens, Douglas Rushkoff, Benjamin Fulford, Tucker Carlson, Ron DeSantis, U.S. Rep. Marjorie Taylor Greene, Amazing Polly, Robert F. Kennedy Jr. and U.S. Rep. Lauren Boebert. The Media team watches social media to report any Blueprint feedback on social media sites. The email letter template has been fully approved by the THI Admin Team. The cover letter is being translated into French and Bulgarian for distributions to Influencers in those countries. It will be available soon for use by members. A highlight of the letter is the use of shorter link addresses, courtesy of the Web Team. Also, a French member of the TPC Europe group suggested adding a line of clarification. It has been added and states that: Translations are of the US Blueprint as an example of what can be started by a small group of people. Each nation will develop its own blueprint. The Research Team is continuing to work with the Web Team and Admin Team, to facilitate a smooth email outreach and feedback system for any influencer we contact utilizing the website email procedure. They will soon be working on the Canadian distribution. Another ten books will be sent out in the next week.

MEDIA TEAM: The Instagram accounts are doing well and garnering attention. The handles are as follows: Blueprintforhumanity111 and Thishow111. We follow the same format across all the platforms as this creates an energetic flow planting the same message daily. THE Vedas show is doing well on the YouTube platform reaching nearly 600 views in a couple of days. We decided to put the whole show out minus the music, as that is a copyright issue. Normal THI shows go out with just an intro and the link in the description box. However, we do put the full Blueprint show out as this has less chance of being flagged. It is also the focus for using the platform. After one of the shows a few months ago a member put together a series of "I deny consent" memes, which we have put out several times now. This weekend there was a campaign in the UK and the theme was "I do not consent". This gave us another opportunity to put out our own. Is this also an example of planting the seed in the collective which is then manifested. While our message differs on many levels, we must hold onto the knowing that we are planting the seeds of the change and that is needed in the world. Our aim remains the same, stay consistent, spread the message and work together, by putting out the frequency that influences others. We need to be the influencers of change not the followers.

NEWCOMERS ZOOM: Newcomers are invited to talk to members at a Newcomers Zoom. If this is the first time you've reached out, don't worry about when you joined us here, the purpose is to help you orient the different groups, or just get to know us better. You can contact us on the main MeWe chat or reach out to Roger Isaacs.

YOUTH WEBSITE: The YouTHInkDifferent Youth Team is developing material for construction of a new Youth Website. A draft outline of topics has been done and youth team members have been asked to choose what pieces speak to their hearts, knowledge & experiences that they would like to contribute. Due to the large volume of topics and content included for parents and teachers guide, it is likely to be a series of guides. The topics include: Nurturing and teaching the whole child guidebook series, starting with lesson one “Learning from the heart.” Website design template to begin as soon as possible with support from the web team to get the youth online space up and running. Build it and they will come. The Media team has been creating and sharing youTHInkdifferent youth-focused memes, to get the name and concept into the collective consciousness. The goal is to have the children to guide the webspace design and we will invite the youth to join and begin creating their own content and future. Many of today’s young people have lost their spirit and heart. This is a direct reflection of the state of the parents, that have yet to transform their wounds into wisdom. This is an opportunity for parents and teachers to alchemise their shadows and shine their light into the world. Parents enslaved by the system are afraid to change and project their pain onto future generations. Be the change and be the guardians. Help the youth to THInk different by being a healthy example. This will give the youth what they need to be the best that they can be. The work we do on ourselves and in THI is not just for our one group or family, but for the all. This is for the collective, for all the children, as they are all our children, children of the earth and the seeds of the new humanity. The solutions and resources spread across the globe whilst supporting our local communities. That is the human connection. Our intention is to empower youth to THInk different, act different, be the change, creators of their future and the future of Humanity. Supporting the youth to live from the heart, valuing their feelings, ideas, interests, talents and skills, whilst assisting them to find their own voice and speak their truth. That raises not only their frequencies, but of the next generation and all of humanity. We do this by knowing and being who we are, the way showers. Becoming the change ourselves and creating a connected community where they feel they belong. For too long past generations have lived in the shadows, but no longer. Now is the time to be the light and shine your loving heart into the world. In the spirit of “Be the Change”, some team members will be making videos and taking photos for the website while camping with extended family in Australia. Seeing families living from the heart with child-guided discoveries is what fun-in-learning is all about.

Web Team update The French versions of the Consent booklet and also the Sacred Divine Masculine and the Sacred Divine Feminine booklet have been posted on the ThinkDifferent website. The thi-show.com bookstore has been updated to include links to the Blueprint website, PDF and paperback, and also to other publications such as the Consent booklet and The Sacred Divine Masculine and The Sacred Divine Feminine booklet. Also the FHSTOS series of books is also available at the THI bookstore.

OVERVIEW: What is more satisfying than having a sense of belonging while working with people who recognize the value of your contributions? This is more of a sense of wellbeing than a daily diet of accolades. Pressures can be felt as we stretch our abilities, but what a feeling when we work as a team to manifest new beginnings. It’s a pathway to learning, a lifestyle of learning, for a lifetime of learning for all.

Some fantastic work done by our teams there that we should all be proud of. Will ask again for those not involved, to come and join us and help your fellow members out. Some have raised concerns about the lack of feedback received so far to the Blueprint. I did say it would be a while before the external validation came through, the real validation is the internal version. It requires many seeds to be planted before the external really takes hold and you all can play a role in that. Come and be a part of it instead of sitting back and waiting for the results. The more hands the lighter the work. But, we have had many internal validations of the Blueprint, that has been reported in these shows. Many members have come to me and said they have showed their friends, family and partners and all have received it well, that is internal validation. The many mentions around the world of the word Blueprint is also an internal validation. Several politicians suddenly mentioning the solutions contained within the book, is internal validation. Some of our members on the trip were showing the Blueprint book and receiving great feedback, that is internal validation. Word is getting out even though we have not had a mass production yet of the books or the pdf's. Work is underway to launch that now and that requires more help from those not involved yet. We need some more data inputters, we need some to send out the emails, receive the feedback and also compile reports for these shows. All of you are more than capable of doing that a few hours a week, which will be a great help to the few who are compiling these shows.

In the last Blueprint show the final piece was about coming together, there was a purpose to that. As this next piece is all about how we all came together, we came, we saw and we conquered. There comes a time in everyone's life where events, happenings, meetings or gathering turns the course of history, both in terms of the self and on a wider scale. Recently we had such an event, a gathering of epic proportions, that few who attended realized it would have such an impact. Apologies for the gap in the shows, but I had another important trip to undertake that was three-fold. One to see my mother again, two do some minor work and three bring people together, all three were successful with the latter being the most prominent. The three days for the THI members gathering will live long in the memory of those who attended. It is safe to say, that was life changing for them all. It is also safe to say that, at the end of the three days none who attended will ever be the same person before they arrived in Dublin. A magical experience for all, even for one guest who doesn't participate with THI, Judith left a changed person as well. The full scope of what THI really stands for came forth in those three days, people coming together, being comfortable with each other, being comfortable with themselves and being better people all round. It is unique in so many ways sadly, as life has dealt us all damaging programs, but with THI's support many have begun to overcome them. THI is a support structure for those tired of the old world and negative ways and strive to be better versions of themselves. Yes THI provides booming shows, endless viewpoints and knowledge, a deeper understanding of this world and even the Blueprint, but the core of THI is a psychological test to push people into becoming a true version of themselves. To shed the insecure mask, the false images presented as themselves and to learn to live, trust and love themselves on a much deeper level than imagined. For too long now we have competed with each other and dragged each other into the gutter. An endless stream of negativity, low on compassion and empathy and worse a lack of real love, by operating in a higher vibration. This was all so much different on a massive scale. All members grew into themselves by the hour and their confidence and shine was radiant by the end of the week. Two years ago I wrote a piece for the show and it was received negatively by some THI female members, because they didn't listen fully to the piece and reverted to negative stereotypes of what they thought it was about. Thankfully two years later that piece is receiving the recognition it deserves, not by words, but by actions. Much of the groundwork of the European group was done in the May meet up, that allowed them to be more comfortable with each other this time. What we ended up this time with was, to put it bluntly was, a full on polyamory. People just loving each other, embracing each other, supporting each other, it was fantastic to see and be a part of. I mentioned earlier that it is unique, because no one gets to experience what we did in a group setting elsewhere, particularly from a diverse geographic and demographic point of view also. How do we know it is unique? Because some people choose to label us as a cult. They cannot comprehend people being nice to each other, despite hardly knowing each other, so they label it a cult. That is fine by me, I care not for their ignorant labels, only that people improve themselves. But isn't it a sad world when people caring and sharing, supporting and loving on each other is labeled as a cult? Perhaps the sterile, negative, compassionless and loveless people need to join the "cult" as then they will feel so much better in themselves. People who label it a cult are ignorant and basically just not nice people, who live sad lives and wallow in victimhood that they have to denigrate others who are not like them, just sad miserable people wishing to destroy the happiness of others. 24 highly intelligent people turned up on this trip to meet me and have fun and enjoy each other's company, what is cultish about that? Nothing, but miserable people suck the life out of everything and everyone, they are harvesters. Ironic really when over half the planet operate within a cult, called religion and a load more under the Freemasonic cult, not to mention the millions operating within the Jewish cult as well. So, 25 people came from around 10 different countries and backgrounds and had a ball together. English, Irish, Polish, Bulgarian, Romanian, Canadian, American, Germans, Dutch, Japanese, Swiss plus some from Cyprus and Portugal, a highly unlikely grouping all coming together as one. And yet it worked beautifully, why? Because those people chose to become better versions of themselves. This has been a common theme to meet ups with me, I get the fact that by and large people are coming to see and also assess me, is he real? Is he human even? Does he come across well in person as on the radio show all valid questions to have and think. Too often now people in the Alt Media have been burnt by program members, charlatans, agency-based puppets and attention seekers and people rightly wondered whether I was another one. The great question I imagine was, is he too good to be true? Does he really care as much as he makes out? Because of shekel making charlatans the meme too good to be true is often rolled out, but that is also a program to counteract genuine people, it runs along the same lines as, where are all the nice guys. The answer as always was right in front of you, but will you see? Will you accept? Will you trust yourself and your own judgement? It is something many of you have struggled with. The solution? Operate only in the heart, the mind just argues with you and you end up losing out. Mind and head games are the antithesis of being a free person. But I don't want to break my heart some will say, so the mind games are easier? What an illusion that is, the heart repairs itself, the head can't, it will just continue to run the same denial programs on you until you learn to get out of your own way. So the people came to see me, but do they engage each other in the same way? The answer to that question on all meet ups I have done is, an emphatic yes. The members are all so comfortable with each other, laughing, joking, hugging all the way. Why? Because they have learned to be comfortable with themselves, which then allows them to be more open with others. But the best experience of the gatherings is, people are free to talk about anything with each other, something that is not too prevalent outside of THI. The eye rolls, the excuse to walk away, you're talking shit comments or the lazy narrative of, you are in a cult. (MJ) Caring and sharing within a free enterprise, being polyamory without the sex aspect, although a number of our THI members are seeking partners within the group now, that was inevitable. Learning to improve the self, weaning off drugs, alcohol and pharma meds, supporting each other financially and lovingly, getting people to think and act for themselves, learning to open their hearts and soul develop, is labeled a cult. Well, you can sign me up to that label every time. If only the rest of the world operated the same way, this world would be a better place, period. The members were that comfortable with each other they shared a sauna and swimming pool with each other. The highlight of which I'm told was Ovi in his speedos, I chose to neither observe or absorb on that occasion. Prior to my trip to the UK we had a long layover in New York and so I invited a member who lives in the region to come and meet up with us. That was Ramona and we spent a lovely hour chatting with her and again the conversation was comfortable. The Monday of the trip involved people flying in from all parts of the world and then assembling at a lovely beach front hotel. That involved Susan having a railway line style track with her car to and from the airport. Mad max did rode again and again and again! Susan is now considering setting up a THI start up business of taxi services to and from Tara and to and from Dublin airport! I hope you all thanked her. Following us all getting together in the hotel, we managed to jump into a conference room for us all and the members were presented with two presentations. One from Pola and one from me. Pola presented life in Montsegur France and the scene of where the real Mary Magdalene was killed by the Cat-holic church troops in the 1000's year not the 0-100 year their books tell you. Pictures and explanations of the area were presented and details of the caves there. Details of the frequencies and energies now ensconced there as well and the full beauty of the Montsegur region. I gave a presentation on some of the work done this year, but focused heavily on the importance of this trip, the bonding of all the members on it. All came away from that presentations with varying emotions that bubbled up to the surface in many of the members. A clarity of what we do, an understanding of what we do, what has played out and what is unfolding on a massive scale. Nobody was left with any illusions after that, we are a force to be reckoned with and we can achieve the impossible dream, if we all apply ourselves. It even contained some Tiny singing, when I asked all members is there a part of any show that you felt was about you, most answered yes. Then I started singing, you're so vain I guess you think this show is about you, you're so vain. Martin and his guitar provided some better singing from himself and other members later that night. Martin has compiled a Cd of his songs and gave me a copy called trust and devotion. All of it recorded by our resident camera woman Kayoko, who is even tinier than me, she is such as treasure organizing everything. With the presentations out of the way and a brief description of where we were all heading to the next day, we readied ourselves for a trip to Tara, Ireland's sacred hill. So, with 5 cars all in a row, all of which were black in color we streamed out the hotel and onto Tara. Tara is known in Irish language as teamhair, teamhair I thought was a reference to Rochelle and Kevin's haircuts, to much laughter in my car. Rochelle and Kevin are teamhair. We arrived in Tara and witnessed some things that were pointers to what had unfolded in our last trip there in May. The ravens protecting the church built right next to the hill, it was witnessed last time with loads of djinns flying around, but not anymore. No gatekeeper or watcher in attendance this time and we strode around the grounds and I was pointing out specific things along the way. The king burial chamber got special attention and then the wind and rain began to rise up. We then were shown the markings on the ground were significant and we then approached the hill, replete with its phallic symbol stone. Then the fun began, the rain was lashing down and the wind was surreal, it was in the 40-50mph or plus range and some were struggling to stay on their feet. We then formed a circle and did some energy work together and I read out a speech related to it and still the wind howled. Everyone was on a high after that was done and we played some music prevalent to the place and day and sang along. Once that was done, the wind mysteriously died down and we went to the shop for some refreshments. Interestingly relating to the severe wind was the speech I wrote two weeks prior to our trip had this line in it. Hear the voices echoing through the valley, sent down wind as echoes of the past, renewed and birthed into the now. All were speaking of the awe of what just took place and how high vibing they all felt. What they were all experiencing was a collective polyamory on a scale they never imagined. It was observed at Tara that one member had much more inner shine than she was allowing herself to reveal, that was Ella and I hope she goes onto fulfill it. Yet again a day out with Tiny set up new baselines of frequencies, emotions and love in an extraordinary way, as all will attest. We played this song at the end of the Tara meeting, perhaps this will trigger the emotions of those who attended that day.

We spent the evening together in a restaurant that could accommodate us all having a meal together, sharing stories of the day. But that day wasn't complete as two old friends returned from the carcass of the THI country groups and the Alan, Alan, Alan fiasco to meet and greet me and the members who could last the pace of the evening. Some didn't as they couldn't hack the pace of the trip, in fact one particular member who I shall not name, erm Amy slept 16 hours on one day of our trip, which left my 84 year old mother aghast. When she finally arose out of her pit making excuses for her excess sleep, my mother in classic Scouse style said, your just a lazy bugger! But Darragh and Catherine Comiskey turned up at the hotel and we had a raucous laugh and joke with them as well, again like all others who have been on trips together they seamlessly fitted in with the other members. They are now wishing to rejoin the group in a meaningful way again, after being burnt out by the whole Alan/Kim fiasco, which is great to see. The final day together was a lot of fun and joy to behold as the members bonded together like no other. We planned a trip out to Newgrange but circumstances dictated we couldn't go there, so I came up with the suggestion to go to Slane Castle and the scene of the Battle of the Boyne, an important place in Irish history. We entered the grounds at Slane Castle and hundreds of grave sites could be seen on the hill overlooking the castle. So, what is the significance of this site to Ireland? It is the modern destruction and takeover of Ireland after the latter day destruction and takeover by the Tuatha De Danaan, who were reptilian to my understanding. That whole story of that battle has been rewritten by the victors and was and is not as portrayed. The British got made the scapegoat, yet whilst there was English and Scots fighting on behalf of William, I suspect neither knew what they were really fighting for. They were fighting for fake royalty and various Houses of the time, including the Stuarts, Bourbons and the Habsburgs. But also in support of William, was Pope Alexandre VIII. The great question the Irish need to ask is, why is the head of the Catholic church supporting the alleged Protestant King William? Interestingly enough given some Irish hatred of the English, the battle map of the two sides states the following: Williamites: Dutch Republic and Scotland. Jacobites: French. No mention of the English, except William went onto becoming the English King after the battle. The Jacobites is who the Irish were supporting, is that not another Jewish bible based grouping? William of Orange was Dutch, the House of Orange ran by French Jews moved to Holland. Which was part of the Dutch East Indies group who transported slaves on Jewish ships. This is why everything in Holland is in the color of Orange, it is celebrating the largely Jewish Houses of families, in more modern day terms, the Rothschild's. The French have played a huge role in all of Europe's his story and yet is barely mentioned outside of THI. The French connection lives on in England to this day, as the three lions on sporting shirts are celebrating the three Houses of France. We walked the grounds of the castle and was told it was closed and to leave and yet the gate was open. We politely declined and spent more time wandering around the grounds. We formed a circle and did some energy work on the whole region within the castle grounds, perhaps they didn't like that too much as they called the police on us. Police were asking our members in the town did you go in the castle grounds? Katrina answered him in German and they left. (M) An interesting thing was observed as we entered the grounds was a tree in the center of the lawn, in front of the castle, that was called The meeting tree. Many birds were seen circling the tree like those at Tara, after our energy work in the grounds, the birds disappeared from around the tree. The cavalcade came away from the castle which had been slain and headed into the town. Two things came up in that town, one from observation and one from a pondering. In the center of the town at a 4 way junction was 3 houses on the corners, all of them had a keystone over each window, which is symbolic. Given the Cat-holics hatred of all things Orange, which includes the Freemasons and their Orange Lodges, why is there three Freemasonic houses in the middle of Slane? The other which was a pondering, is even more in your face than the Masonic buildings. Given the Irish hatred of the orange color, why has no one asked why orange is in their national flag? The colors are green, white and orange. This got me thinking deeper and I began to ask whether it was symbolizing something else entirely. On either side you have the Irish green and the Dutch Orange, who then fought each other. But in the middle there is the white color, is it symbolizing the destruction of the white race by getting both sides to fight each other? For further evidence of this let's look at the American and British flags, both are red, white and blue. Again the white is in the middle, during the American civil war in 1812 you had the British redcoats and the American bluecoats, they fought each other as well and guess who lost the most people, the whites again. A reminder from Part 4 of FHSTOS. That civil war was stated to be about trade routes and a treaty, that was unpopular which led to rallying points by the pro-French Republicans, led by Thomas Jefferson and James Madison, in wresting power from the pro-British Federalists, led by George Washington and John Adams. Oh my! two of the great American names Thomas Jefferson fighting for the French, and George Washington for the British, 36 years after America's so-called Independence, well that piece shatters that illusion, doesn't it? Which country was it that came to feed and rescue America and Americans in that war? Russia, so you can now see all our history in every country was utter rubbish from day one. The great question is; are certain flags of the white countries symbolizing their destruction? Why would the Irish have orange in their flag? After that we took another trip that was further down the Boyne River which yielded more than was first imagined. A strange beam of light was witnessed in my camera and several other members phones, it was not from the sun and remained a mystery. Until our Swiss brainiac Simon came up with a pondering and theory, which was then matched when he overlaid it onto a map. The beam of light was coming from Slane Castle, was it related to the energy work we had done there two hours previously? We then entered a garden area and a place called the Octagonal Gardens which was strangely surrounded by statues of Greek gods. I felt into the place and it didn't feel good, it was a dipped arena of sorts that had clearly been filled in to cover something up, just like all the Native American sacrifice sites we have visited. In the center was a stone and I could see the outline of the original wall under the grass. There was four entrances into the pit, all at cardinal points. The center stone was the original altar and this was ascertained as a gladiator style pit, where they brought animals in to fight the people and be sacrificed. We did an energy clearing of the site and departed back to the hotel. There was a joke type scenario on the last night as a Romanian, Bulgarian, Dutch, Japanese and Swiss went into a bar and started dancing. The great THI dance off, which I observed not absorbed as the butler took center stage, even the heapster got in on the act. Him and Amy tried some fancy dancing moves and he ended up part strangling her. Even are more shy members like Truus and Ellen bopped away. We even had two birthday celebrations in our group on the last night, which was highly emotional. As Ovi and Susan celebrated another solar year to their extensive catalogue of anniversaries. All lovingly celebrated by all the members. It will probably be a birthday Ovi will never forget, 24 people all loving on him. After I had delivered a final speech about the trip and the importance of it, DJ Paul played some THI playlist songs which resulted in a full on group hug which I was in the center of. All singing, all hugging, all swaying to the beat and many crying with the joy of the emotions of it, not just Rochelle this time. The Blueprint anthem tune Follow your heart got a full rendition by all the members in particular. Not sure what the hotel staff thought of it all, but we enjoyed ourselves. Although they did come and support the birthday celebrations with us and brought Ovi and Susan's cake in. It was a special moment where all members just came together and enjoyed and embraced each other's company to the full. A magical experience that was felt by the all. Having played compare for the proceedings I then went outside to do some cigar smoking dancing and observing through the window. Although the dance and singing session continued outside into the morning, with several THI songs. One of the events of the trip was the ingenuity of our members, one lovingly labeled as groot, Steve and also man mountain Shaun going through the town, the airport and the hotel and promoting the Blueprint book. Perhaps that is something more members could do. One of our younger members is still in the UK and she was taken on a Nordic walk with an 84 year old and couldn't last the pace I am told, how embarrassing is that for the Montsegur representative? In classic Ovi speak, Pola are you saying you cannot keep up with a pensioner? Another funny on the trip was when the airport parking locked our car keys inside the petrol cap. Subsequent calls got more and more testy, as first Amy is given a rendition of classic British customer service and then Todd. The operator said Amy, Amy, Amy, Amy when you learn to speak English call me back and hung up. So Todd rang and was told you sound like Amy now f off and put the Scouser on the call. Just the classic British customer service. Todd, Amy and I also got to hear the live version of Sirens and Z Cars that is played at the opening of the THI shows. A stirring rendition with large crowd noise standing outside Everton football ground. Which was very emotional for me personally. Interestingly some of our members who stayed the whole week in Ireland and went back to visit Tara again. Dolores Cannon and her entourage turned up there with much fanfare I heard and was being prompted to look at the Blueprint herself. She proceeded to take pictures of it and was then directed to the website. Funny that, as just after we left Tara in May Elana Danaan turned up with an entourage there as well. Are the Alt Media coming to check our work there? If they are cool, if operating under wrong intentions they will face consequences of actions. Actions undertaken there will not and cannot be interfered with. The final song is our main Blueprint theme and a line in it keeps playing for me, that is likely to be important for me and you all. This is the time in your life to be free, you've got to follow your heart. The coming days, weeks and months of this year will determine that path for myself in particular and you all. I set out with two objectives that whittled down to one by the time we arrived in the UK. It was to create a European village community in the same way I created the American village community. It doesn't have to be where we all live in close proximity like here, we can create a village within our hearts no matter what the distance is. Roger, Kevin, Colleen and Rochelle will attest to that fact. The European community really bonded together this trip in the same way the American and Canadian members have. With that accomplished we combined the American and European village into one village, one community and one purpose with this trip. A bonding that must be maintained and indeed enhanced. The tears of joy will live long in the memory, the embracing of each other also, the frequencies and the high vibes as well. A final reminder and I hope this show encompasses it, bottle it and take it with you. These trips and the time spent together are something to behold and I thank you all for attending. Many members are asking when is the next one and where, no idea of that as yet, but I am sure I will come up with something likely in the next year. It has changed the landscape of what THI is all about, the polyamory and the supporting of members to elevate themselves into better people. Hold onto the memories of our time together and remember we are all important in this group. It is time for all to step up and embrace each other and The Blueprint that has the potential to change everyone's lives for the better. All you have to do is, follow your heart. Till we meet again.
