FOREWORD

What is truth?

Some say truth is in the eye of the beholder, according to what information is available, according to background of culture and religion, and according to mindset in a given time of life. Certainly, we each have “our truth,” as we know it: truth about ourselves, our family and friends, our surroundings. But even our perception of ourselves over a lifetime can change, altering what is “true.”

Precisely because of this variation of knowledge and perception from one individual to another and from one time to another, the concept of truth becomes nebulous...muddled.

So let us look instead at “history.” That is supposed to be factual, right?

But as has been repeated many times, history is written by the victor. So his-story is not necessarily our-story. And it is known that libraries have been burned, books destroyed or rewritten, evidence hidden, and witnesses killed to cover up factual realities that are inconvenient for the current regime.

“Those who do not learn from history are doomed to repeat it.” That is exactly why historical documents and other evidence are erased by those of wicked intent.

The question that follows is: Do we want to know our true history? Are we content to repeat the mistakes of the past out of ignorance, thus to live in comfortable complacency for a time, but to risk utter loss of control over our own destiny? Or are we prepared to face the discomfort of discovery that virtually everything we have thought was true is a lie meant to subjugate and enslave us?

If you dare to know, read on.

PREFACE

People must know the past to understand the present, and to face the future.

— Nellie McClung

The From His Story to Our Story series is based on ancient knowledge retained by a few individuals and groups, on documented evidence, on candid interviews with named persons, on published articles, and on conclusions and conjecture drawn from the aforementioned and from patterns of action and inaction.

Certain factions and their associates will undoubtedly cry foul at the publication of this information, as they do whenever light is shone upon their immoral or outright criminal acts and their malevolent intentions. It should be noted that the group primarily responsible for wars and atrocities over centuries since they came into existence goes by many names, hiding behind any religion, race, or nationality convenient to their purpose, and behind one group in particular.

However, in this series of books and the podcasts from which they are adapted, blame is not specifically placed on those who have been duped into believing themselves kindred of the beings referred to in this series as An-nunaki. To some extent, we are all responsible for allowing that group to gain power, to harm us and others, to convince us of their lies, and to trick or coerce or seduce us into doing their bidding. All of us must take responsibility, and all of us must learn from the mistakes of the past in order to correct them in the present and prevent them in the future.

Those who take offence at the revelations in this series need to look inward to discover why they feel threatened by such knowledge.

And those who wish to suppress truth need to know that their attempts to hide facts are failing, their crimes being revealed, their power and wealth disintegrating, and their world ending. The covenants are broken, consent revoked, Light shining, and the new Day of Svarog is underway.

PART ONE

THE INTRODUCTION

On our paths of discovery many aspects of the truth and new revelations have shocked us to the core: that this was a lie, no this and that was a lie as well. Read the next chapter of discovery, and it therein contains a whole heap more lies—one giant tapestry of deception on so many levels—that permeate throughout all levels of societies and their operations.

The truths and history, as in his story, is always written by the victors of the spoils, they say. Another line is: Make a lie big enough, and repeat it often enough, it then installs itself as the new truth.

Truth is a funny thing as it is subjective to the individual at the time, but not always fixed at that time, providing the individual remains open to all possibilities. That truth can sometimes change, as new revelations present themselves in a way that triggers the individual to take notice of them, and possibly realign with them.

Truth has been distorted due to the lack of knowledge, criminally denied to us as a species, and this lack has subsequently severely hampered our development as a species. Like the education system tells you, “Repeat after me,” but is it not the case that you are blindly repeating something and you have no idea whether it is correct or not? The teacher tells you it is, and many just accept it. But who said the teacher is knowledgeable? No one. We just assumed they were and this is what has led us to being where we are today, searching for answers.

Mahatma Gandhi said, “The truth is the truth, even if it is in the minority of one.”

Society insists teachers, doctors and mainstream media tell you the truth, so that one person can’t possibly be right or true. That is what is known as programmed thinking. The only way to avoid that is to be a critical thinker, add in some long-term memory and an ability to overview things, and you get yourself to be one badass for the programmed society and in general a target for attacks from the system and the frankly ignorant people who are propping the whole system of control up.

Any true observer will see this madness for what it is: total unsanity. Being in sanity makes you sane, whereas these people are unsane and so operate in unsanity.

This book peels back the layers and the players of the lies and shines light into one particular region of the planet—about which we know so little and what we do know about it is distorted beyond all reality. That country is now known as Russia. We will be delving into the missing names and peoples.

If asked to name three things to describe Russia, most of you will say commies or communists, Putin and vodka. That’s their story, not her story, which has been brutally destroyed and hijacked, perhaps more than anywhere else across the world. We are going to redress the balance in this book in some way.

Here you will learn who are the Rus, Lemuria, lost continents, wizards, how it was taken over and the current version of communism implemented, and by whom. We will also describe evolutionary-advanced human beings, ET help and the teachers, ET destruction and how, how modern civilization comes out not from Africa, but the North, in Slavic-Aryan-Rus regions. And how religions have distorted the original teachings, where those teachings came from, ancient wars, ancient peoples, death, destruction and reseeded of life, and the ongoing battle to restore Humanity back to the levels of spiritual evolution the people of the Rus-Slavonic-Aryan civilization were at.

Our story is ultimately a triumph of Light over Dark, done in a way that doesn't wipe out the Dark ones, but gives them a chance to redeem themselves and come back into a balance.

Before we get into the deeper layers and the ancient past, I would like to cover the more modern version of the destruction of the USSR and by whom.

World War I was all about stealing the wealth of the Aryans and destroying Russia. At the same time, certain peoples who were instrumental in that catastrophic collapse of a country and its peoples were busy in another country setting the stage for future battles of control via The Balfour Declaration. This was readying the stage for creating a new country in which to stage their programs of death and destruction, control and resource stealing, whilst feeding the lower astral with a plethora of deaths and karmic energy. That was in England. Meanwhile the stage was being prepared in Germany for another theater of operations. And all this happened around 1919, not long after the same group of people took over the world's financial center via the Federal Reserve.

A systematic global takeover by one particular group doing the dirty work of a hidden element that many people deny exists.

But it also must be remembered that we must not tarnish all the peoples connected to this group as all being the same; they are not, and they have been damaged in more clever ways, using psychology that political-agenda specialists have also done to Russia and many other countries.

The beginning of this exposé is about the Russian Bolshevik Revolution in 1919.

THE BOLSHEVIK REVOLUTION

A lot of the research for this chapter was delivered in the main by Nicolai Levashov, a brilliant man with a brilliant mind, who understood life and things far beyond most people's understanding. His death at the hands of the control system of liars in 2012 did not go unnoticed, and this book is the first in the Western world to cover Levashov's extensive work.

Among the great empires there has been much history revealed: Roman, British, Ottoman, Genghis Khan Mongol, Greek, and the current American Empire, all lavished with narratives of great achievements in battles and conquests.

Yet, curiously, hardly any of the rest of the world knows of the Rus empire, or the region known as Tartaria, and even less about the whole continent that went missing north of Siberia. History teachers never told us any of that knowledge. In this book we will find out why.

Back in 1919, when the USSR was being looted after having lost the war, a "Revolution" as it was called took place—not by the Russian people, but by outsiders claiming all the spoils of a deliberately engineered war, the plans of which were laid out in 1888 by Albert Pike, a 33rd degree Mason. In his scheme, he stated this was to be the first of three world wars the elites in power wished to unfold on the people of Midgard (the real name of Earth; Earth means inhabited planet).

These objectives were all laid out as some sort of mystical prophecy. But if we delve deep enough into all the so-called prophets and prophecies, a hidden Dark agenda appears when you scratch the surface: Prophecies are not possible future events, far from it; they are intentions. These are and were plans the elites in power wanted unveiled.

You see, to them all the world is a stage. They played the lead roles while we were the extras in the scene, and expendable ones at that. So having played out Act 1 with World War I, now they went about creating the next stage in the theater of operations.

Let's examine a few facts:

All people or nations of the Earth, independent of their real role in the world's fate, wrote their Great History. There would be nothing wrong with this, except it appears that everything that concerns Russia is filled with obvious hatred on the part of those who wrote the history of the Russian people. In their opinion, the Slavs lived in earth pits until the 9th century, and were so primitive that they did not even have their own state system and had to invite the Varangians (Swedish) to govern them.

Historians neglected to mention that the Swedes had no organized state then either, and were essentially run by criminal gangs who looted their neighbors. Varangians were the Vikings, or the real meaning of Vikings, which is VI kings = six kings. They all operated under the six-kings flag.

The historians also were terribly ignorant upon another subject, stating that in the 9th century two saints, Cyril and Mefodiy, created the Slavonic written language on the basis of the Greek one and, thus, gave the “light of knowledge” to the dull Slavs. Moreover, the Mongol-Tatars had kept the Russian people in slavery for three hundred years, and only when Peter the Great “cut a window through” Europe and transformed Russia according to the European “image and likeness,” did Russia become the Great Empire, etc.

So that is the history of Russia as they have portrayed it.

It appears that the modern history of the Russian people was actively created at the time of the Romanov dynasty, which first came to power in 1613, and the Bolsheviks took the baton from them after the revolution of 1917. Or so we are told.

The Romanov history of Russia was created in the 18th century by the great Russian historiographers—except none of them were Russian people: Gottlieb (Theophil) Siegfried Bayer (Rothschild), Gerard Friedrich Müller, August Ludwig (von) Schlözer, all of whom were German, although Bayer is the name for the Rothschild clan and so it is Jewish.

They had never learnt Russian, but nevertheless they wrote the history of the Russian State?

A pretty interesting picture is observed. Anyone who feels like it, be they German or Jewish, can write the history of the Russian people, but not Russians, who are made out to be so primitive they are unable to write their own history. In reality, many of the Russian historians were dismissed completely, and Gumilev spent his best years in a concentration camp, while Fomenko and other historians were disregarded because they were declared “not certificated specialists.”

So, these Germans and later Jewish individuals essentially did an overwrite of Russian history and completely neglected the Vedics of the Motherland, the knowledge and light mastery of the Rus—all conveniently reconstructed in the image of the revisers’ social order. This continued what had started over 1,000 years ago: the Dark effects of an age known as The Night of Svarog.

According to the Vedic texts, the Nights of Svarog are areas of space into which our planet periodically enters with the rotation of our Galaxy, areas which create a negative evolutionary warp. This launched 1,008 years of Dark, which ended in 2020.

If the term “Vedic texts” seems familiar to you and you are thinking it is all to do with India, this section will show exactly where those texts originated—and it was not India.

Rurik the Varangian was invited to reign according to the then-existing Slavonic tradition, which was to choose as a ruler the most deserving Slavonic prince at the Veche (a popular assembly). This kind of invitation usually was temporary, and only in the matter of special services for the good of the people. The rule of a prince could be lifelong, but it was never inherited.

I would like to draw your attention to the fact that in Rus there were two branches of power, a civil authority and a military one, which initially were equal; that is, one authority did not submit to the other. These branches of power served as a counterbalance to each other, preventing one from dominating over the other. Oh, how America and other countries require that balance of governance now!

Rurik created the Russian state with Russian laws from the Vikings’ law system, which in principle can be reduced to one law: the law of the sword, or simply the law of force.

So according to history rewritten, the Slavs were a backward race that needed ruling. And yet they had a whole empire known as The Slavonic-Aryan Empire, with a sophisticated state system, long and deep books of knowledge, and a people operating in a higher frequency and evolutionary spiritual development that was way beyond any other species before and after.

For thousands of years and perhaps many millennia, this empire encompassed most of Europe as its provinces.

So, let's shed light on the real history of the Great Russian people.

It is stated that chauvinism is alien to the Russian people, and not a single minority resident on the territory of the Russian State was destroyed, even when they came as enemies. They all kept their language, culture and traditions. In addition, many minorities were kept safe only because Russian blood was shed; the Georgians, Armenians, Tajiks, Kirghizs, Kajsans, Kalmucks and many others were saved from being wiped out by their enemies—something the Chechens have forgotten the most. They appealed for help against “Russian chauvinism” to the world community and primarily to the USA, for some reason forgetting or simply not knowing that in this very country, Russia, which defends human rights all over the world, human rights of Russians for some reason were repeatedly violated.

To put this in perspective:

When migrants from Western Europe arrived in North America, there were about twenty million American Indians (almost the same number of people that lived then in the whole of Western Europe), who formed more than 2,200 tribes and nations of the pre-Columbus America. Today, only 500 tribes exist, with a population totaling about eight hundred thousand persons that live on reservations, which are in the worst and least productive parts of their Motherland. 1,700 tribes of Native Americans disappeared forever from the face of their own land. But for that, their number could now have been equal to the current European population.

Two hundred and fifty thousand Americans of Japanese origin were thrown into concentration camps in 1941 just because they had Japanese roots.

The Americans never shed a drop of their blood rescuing others. It is true that they politely offered the Kingdom of Hawaiian Islands their protection from the Japanese during the American-Japanese war in 1941-1945 (that was provoked by President Roosevelt). But for some reason their defending and care went so far that, since then, Hawaii has become the fiftieth and, for now, the last state of the USA. Persons interested could ask the native Hawaiians what they think about this kind of defense and care.

But for some reason no one sees all this, while Russia is blamed for all deadly sins. This is done instead of gratitude that Russia saved dozens of small and not-so-small peoples from total extermination, both physical and spiritual.

Certainly, as in the history of any other country, Russia has had its black days. There were enough degenerates and dregs among the Russian people who held nothing sacred, who became social outcasts at their own wish and treated their Motherland like the enemy. Luckily, there were not so many of them.

The most powerful blow to the Russian people, to the Hyperboreans (Aryans' direct descendants) was inflicted during the Night of Svarog, when in 1917 Black Freemasons, who for the sake of public opinion called themselves Bolsheviks, took power in the Russian Empire. There were almost no ethnic Russians in this black power that pounced upon the Russian people, on their culture and history, with all its force.

In the concentration camps created in Lenin's lifetime, millions of Russians, the cream of the nation—the Russian nobility, Russian intellectuals, the Corps of Russian officers, Russian industrialists, Russian merchants—were all destroyed. All of these classes were destroyed, sparing no one. Not only men, but women, children and old people were mercilessly killed outside of any court and trial. No court would be able to bring any legal foundation to justify the destruction of entire classes of society, according to the principle of belonging to a class.

All of this took place with the implicit agreement of the rest of the world, often with its active assistance, and no one yelled about the genocide of the Russians, about the destruction of the flower of the Russian nation.

Most people bred into the Soviet education system may object, “But these were the representatives of exploiter classes!” The great Karl Marx and his no-less-great followers like Frederic Engels, Vladimir Ulyanov (Lenin), Leon Trotsky (Bronstein), and many, many others wrote and said so.

All those people just mentioned, as well as most other theorists and practical workers of the revolution were ethnic Jews. So, why is the revolution in Russia called the Great Russian Revolution if Jews theoretically laid the foundation and put it into practice, using money from the American Jews?

The last part of this money, $20 million, was delivered to Russia in August 1917 by Leon (Leyba) Trotsky, an ethnic Jew born in the Russian Empire, but also an American citizen. It was this money, in gold, an unbelievably enormous sum for those times, from the Russian “ally” America, which allowed Black Freemasons of Judaic nationality to hire Latvian hit-men and Chinese criminals who, together with Judaic fighting squads, perpetrated the Great “Russian” Revolution.

After the overthrow of the Russian government and officials, the demographics of the important positions in Russia changed, according to data furnished by the Soviet press. Out of 556 important functionaries of the Bolshevik state in 1918-1919 there were: 2 Ukrainians, 11 Armenians, 35 Letts [Latvians], 15 Germans, 1 Hungarian, 10 Georgians, 3 Poles, 3 Finns, 1 Czech, 1 Karaim, just 17 Russians, and the two key figures as well as by far the largest number of people at 82% of the overall numbers, 457 Jews.

After the “Great Russian Revolution” had won and the flower of the Russian nation had been destroyed, new black rulers organized an artificial famine, which ultimately starved to death twenty million peasants. The vast majority of those killed were Russians, Ukrainians and Belorussians.

Then the new governing structure set about trying to make people “voluntarily” enter into kibbutzim (collective farms), an idea that came from Lazar Kaganovich, who presented the idea to Joseph Stalin; both of them were Zionists.

A Zionist education was to be instituted, that the peasants must operate “in the light.” And in order to do that to the Russian muzhik (peasant), the Israelites in power decided to organize what they called “the enlightenment of souls” and created an artificial famine, taking away from peasants all grain, including seeds.

On collecting an enormous amount of the first-class grain, communists sold it for nothing on the American exchange through the Soviets’ best friend Armand Hammer, another Zionist, thus causing a crisis at the exchange. As a result, the American farmers were forced either to throw out their grain or to sell it for peanuts to Hammer, and he sent barges filled with this grain for the starving in the USSR in exchange for priceless religious artifacts, with which militant atheists filled the same barges.

The Russian Orthodox Church had accumulated these artifacts for almost a thousand years. Which is why it may have been of historic importance when leaders of the Russian Orthodox Church visited Israel for the first time in many years recently: Perhaps they were getting back their artifacts?

So, how did the new rulers' lives go? In essence these were migrants, not natives, but here is how they lived:

As a member of a kibbutz on the territory of Eretz Yisrael, each man received a cottage for the time he lived in a kibbutz, and received some salary. In return, he must work off only a few hours a day, and the rest of the time he could learn Hebrew (free of charge) or study. A migrant was free to do all this only if he wished, but never under compulsion.

On the other hand, the Israelites-Bolsheviks drove the Russian peasants into collective farms by force, taking away everything that they gained by their labor. But the forcing of the Russian peasants into collective farms ultimately failed, so the Zionists came up with a new plan: A wealthy peasant was declared to be a kulak, a Russian term for wealthy farmers, and five million people immediately were stripped of all their possessions and sent to Siberia with only the clothes they wore when being thrown out of their homes.

History tells you these were "voluntary migrants"; however, they were not sent to dwell in ready-made cottages in well-equipped settlements, but to live alfresco in the open country, more precisely in the virgin taiga, which is essentially unincorporated land, with no buildings, no agriculture, nothing. People were dropped off in the middle of nowhere and given one axe, one saw and one shovel for the whole group. Basically, they were back to hunter-gatherers and rebuilding. But few could survive the winter in these conditions; this is Siberia, after all.

History told us that the party of Bolsheviks served the proletariat, also known as the revolutionary class, but neglected to specify that the party of Social Democrats (the Bolsheviks faction) came from the Bund, which was a Judaic (Jewish) nationalistic party—in other words, a Zionist party!

There were almost NO workers or peasants among Israelites!

It is hardly revolutionary when a coup d'état only appears to serve one class of people, a people that were not native to that region. That means the so-called Revolution was really an invasion of Russia.

Moreover, all highly qualified workers were the first people the Bolsheviks destroyed. This class, whose interests the Bolsheviks-Leninists claimed to defend so zealously by means of the dictatorship of proletariat, was simply wiped out by them. The fact of the matter is that the skilled workers did not need anyone defending their interests: They got a good salary, at times greater than their colleagues in the developed western countries; there were kindergartens and day nurseries in their enterprises; they could afford to spend their holidays in Italy, Greece, etc.—all of which obviously did not coincide with the image of the "oppressed class, which had nothing to lose except for its own chains."

In order that there would be no one who could appeal against this kind of defense, they were simply destroyed, and then it was much easier to defend the interests of an already non-existent class.

This can be confirmed by the fact that, at the moment of the revolution, there were twenty-five thousand members in the Bolshevik party, almost all of whom were professional revolutionaries. The majority of them lived in immigration, being in need of nothing, which required, in those not-so-distant times, considerable sums of money.

I would like to remind people that a professional revolutionary is engaged only in the revolutionary activity and in nothing else. So, in other words and to bring it up to modern-day terms, these revolutionaries were mercenaries.

So, if there had been workers in this party, they would have been only former ones.

All party members were professional revolutionaries whose work consisted of the undermining of the existent political system and required enormous financial means. Therefore, bank robberies and other similar methods used by the criminal-soldiers of the party (of which Joseph Stalin was one) could introduce only a tiny share. The main means for the Russian Revolution came from far-away America. And the American multimillionaires who played the role of Santa Claus for the Bolsheviks were all Jews.

It turned out to be quite strange, the Great “Russian” Revolution, didn’t it?

It was prepared, performed and financed by Jews, and the country was headed by Jews after it. But nevertheless, in all the history books it is called the Great Russian Revolution! A revolution that destroyed mainly only Russians and other Slavs.

Stalin subjected to repression dozens of millions of people, the majority of whom again were Russians, Ukrainians and Byelorussians. Certainly, all other people who lived in Russia also suffered from all this, but the overwhelming majority of victims of the regime, as well as most of the victims of the Second World War, were Slavs, Russian people.

Out of the fifty million who died in World War II, about thirty million were the people of the Soviet Union. In comparison, the Germans lost around nine million people.

However, even when the war was finished, the process of destruction of the Slavs did not stop, but only took other forms. In fact, the whole 20th century, the last century of the Night of Svarog, was the century of the genocide of the Russian people, which lost, according to different calculations, from seventy to ninety million of its sons and daughters. And this is only the direct loss.<sup>1</sup>

So, when the whole world accuses Russians of the distribution of the Communist pest, I sense there is a great bitterness in Russia because of this kind of injustice.

For me personally if I was asked the essence of why I do what I do, the answer will always be injustice, and wrongness of this world.

Nicolai Levashov, when asked who yells about it most of all, said, “It is exactly those who are the real culprits in all these crimes, the peoples known as the Israelites, who hypocritically are making themselves out to be the victims of this system.”

History yet again rewritten by the hands of the victors. It is way past time Humanity received the real truth and made their own minds up as to what is real and what is not.

I want to make it clear again: This is in no way disparaging to all Jewish people, no more than all American people can be blamed for the total genocide the US military has perpetrated globally since World War II. This is a select group within the Jewish community, being led by insidious psychopaths that care not for Humanity in the slightest, and least of all for the Jewish people. To them, it is all about a political ideology and agenda, with an end goal of control of the whole world, its people, the knowledge, and our resources, and then holding us to ransom.

I think it is high time this treasonous act against Humanity is shut down once and for all, and people see Russia and its people in a new light—and I mean Light, and not the total Darkness that has been portrayed to the world.
